

Daniel O'Shea

Assistant Planner

Daniel brings enthusiasm, strong research skills and keen eye for detail to support the team and his fellow colleagues in the London Office across a diverse range of Planning Projects.

BA Geography, Geopolitics and Global Affairs – Royal Holloway, University of London

Daniel has recently returned to Planning Potential as an Assistant Planner after completing his undergraduate degree. He first joined Planning Potential's London Office on a work placement in 2025 as part of his undergraduate studies, where he supported colleagues with research, planning, policy analysis, and the preparation and monitoring of planning applications.

Daniel hopes to commence an RTPI-accredited MSc in Spatial Planning and Development at the University of Reading in September 2026 to further develop his planning skills.

Outside of work, Daniel enjoys playing tennis, spending time with friends and family, and travelling to explore new and exciting places.
