

COMMENDATION

In ship management, the quality and reliability of shore-based technical support can have a direct bearing on the safety, efficiency and continuity of vessel operations. This makes it particularly important for shipowners and managers to have dependable partners who understand the realities of working with vessels, equipment, crews, class requirements and increasingly complex regulatory standards.

Moloobhoys have established themselves over many decades as a recognised name in the Indian maritime sector, with capabilities across system-integration, communication and navigation electronics, lifesaving & firefighting appliances, servicing, preventive maintenance, inspection, and technical support. Their approach is aligned with the understanding that marine customers require more than products; they require competent people, dependable service and timely solutions when equipment and operational issues arise.

What is particularly commendable is the organisation's ability to combine the experience and relationships built over more than a century with a continuing focus on technology, technical training, and evolving customer requirements. This combination of maritime heritage and forward-looking capability is important in an industry where safety, compliance, reliability and operational efficiency are increasingly interconnected.

I have great respect for organisations that remain committed to serving the maritime industry over generations while continuing to adapt to its changing needs. I wish the Moloobhoy Group every success in its continued growth and international expansion, and look forward to seeing the organisation build further on its long-standing contribution to the maritime community.
