Who doesn't qualify?

With a few exceptions, the following conditions prevent most potential patients from qualifying for a non-surgical phalloplasty procedure:

Previous use of silicone oil injections or unknown substances

Individuals with multiple surgeries, extensive trauma, or significant scarring

An excessive focus on penis size, unrealistic expectations, or a desire for extreme results

Body dysmorphia; people who cannot tolerate minor imperfections, are dissatisfied with average results, or are overly concerned about potential complications

If you fall into any of these categories, you might still qualify, but you'll need to have a detailed in-person consultation and physical assessment prior to acceptance.

Linnea™

Linnea™ is a permanent soft tissue filler made of 40-micron PMMA microspheres suspended in a water-based gel.

It comes in two concentrations: 10% and 30%.

Here's how it works:

- The microspheres help stimulate collagen production around them, adding volume.
- Because PMMA doesn't break down, it stays in the tissues permanently, with its collagen-boosting effects lasting for life.
- The implant remains firm and stable, doesn't migrate, and is not toxic or cancer-causing.
- The results are permanent and not reversible; if you want to remove the implant, surgery is required.

Ellansé™

Ellansé™ is a very long-lasting soft tissue filler made of 40-micron PCL microspheres suspended in a water-based gel.

It comes in one concentration: 30%.

Here's how it works:

- The microspheres help stimulate collagen production around them, adding volume.
- Since PCL breaks down very slowly, it stays in the tissues for years, and its collagen-boosting effects last for a very long time.
- The implant remains firm and stable, doesn't migrate, and is not toxic or cancer-causing.
- The results are long-lasting and slowly reversible.

Request More Information

Where is the filler injected?

The soft tissue filler goes under the skin of the penis, into the areolar space (yellow layer) between two fibrous membranes:

- Superficial Fascia (Dartos)
- Deep Fascia (Buck's)

Uncircumcised patients

For uncircumcised patients, especially those with long foreskin or loose skin when relaxed, the non-surgical phalloplasty procedure requires adjustments.

The approach is more conservative, and the doctor may reduce the amount or concentration of the filler, such as using 10% Linnea® instead of 30% (left picture).

Using too much filler can cause a deformity called the "accordion effect," (central picture) where the loose skin bunches up at the base of the penis, potentially interfering with sexual activity. This issue can be resolved with circumcision (right picture).

Patients opting for a conservative approach will see moderate gains. The doctors at Avanti Derma™ recommend uncircumcised patients aim for average results or consider a low and tight circumcision before proceeding with further treatments.

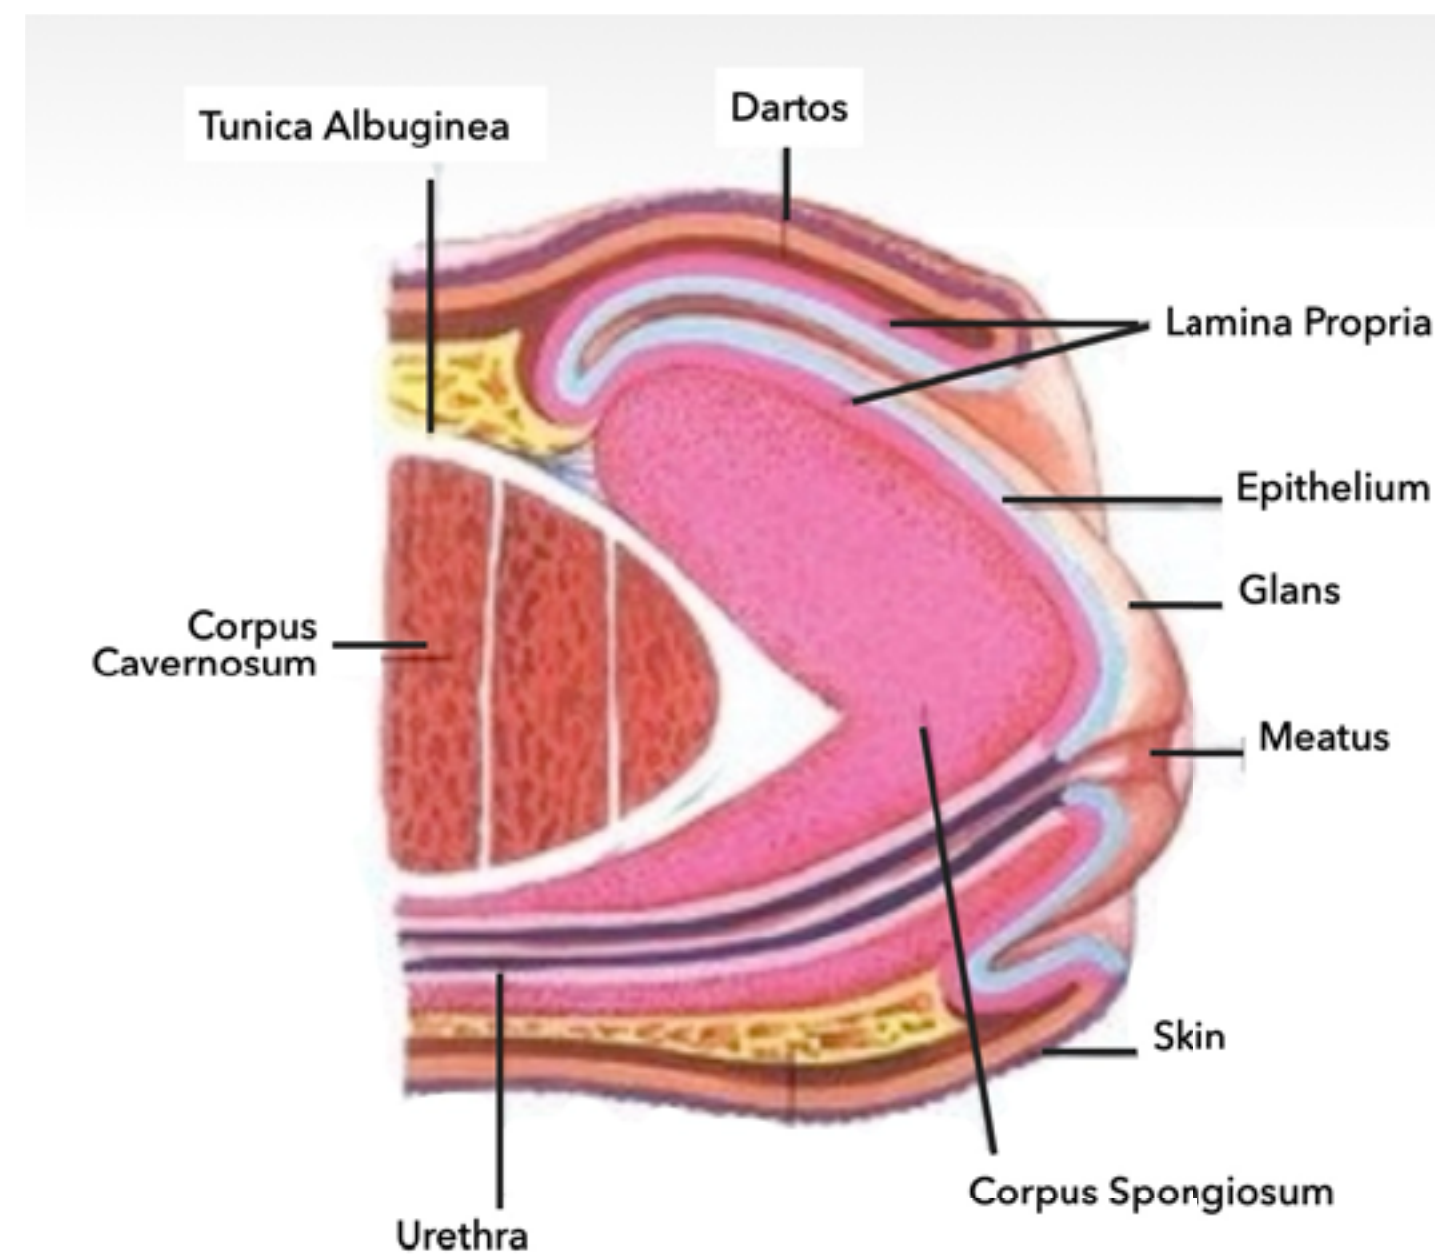

If circumcision is performed, patients should wait three months after the scar heals before resuming treatment. For advice on circumcision, feel free to contact us.

Glans Enhancement

The glans enhancement procedure has limitations due to the small space for fillers. Only two thin membranes, the lamina propria and epithelium, can be augmented, but they offer minimal room.

Only Hyaluronic Acid is considered safe for a moderate enhancement, and permanent fillers, like Ellansé® and Linnea®, are not recommended by Avanti Derma™ for this area.
