

GORA

R Y E S G A D E 3 0 B • K Ø B E N H A V N

I ALOO PAPDI CHAAT

95 KR

Potato cut soft. Papdi cut for crunch.

Yogurt over both, then tamarind sweet, then mint sharp and green.

Pomegranate scattered like something spilled and not cleaned up.

II DOH KLEH

89 KR

A salad from the hills, not the plains.

Pork cooked, then chilled, dressed sharp with mustard oil and ginger.

Not what you expect from an Indian menu. That is the point.

III POMFRET FRY

165 KR

Whole pomfret, scored to the bone.

Marinated in red chili and turmeric, fried hard until the crust holds.

Eaten with the bones in. That is how it should be.

IV KASHMIRI CHAAMP

195 KR

A single lamb chop, nothing more.

Marinated overnight, cooked over flame until the fat renders.

The meat pulls from the bone before the knife arrives.

V RAJASTHANI BHINDI

145 KR

Okra, and only okra.

Dry-cooked with onion and whole spice until the sliminess is gone.

What remains is the vegetable and its char, nothing hiding behind it.

VI CHAMPARAN MUTTON

225 KR

Mutton sealed into a pot, and left alone.

Whole spice, no water, hours of its own steam.

What comes out is dark and falls from the bone before you ask it to.

VII KERALA FISH CURRY

205 KR

Fish, coconut, and a sour note.

Simmered slow, kokum for the sour, mustard seed cracked hot at the end.

Eaten with rice, not around it. There is no other way.

VIII OLD DELHI BUTTER CHICKEN

215 KR

Chicken on the bone, marinated twice.

Finished in a gravy built on tomato, butter, and cream.

The dish most people think they already know. They don't.

IX DAL MAKHANI

125 KR

Black lentils, and the whole night.

Butter and cream folded in only at the end, not before.

The dish every kitchen is judged by, and most kitchens fail.

X BIRYANI FOR TWO

325 KR

Rice and meat, sealed under one lid.

Cooked together until neither is quite itself anymore.

Meant to be shared. Ordered by two who intend to.

PARATHA

45 KR

Layered bread, cooked on the flame until it blisters. Torn, not cut.

RICE

40 KR

Steamed, plain. Meant to hold everything else up.

Please advise of any allergies before ordering