This area of Tokyo is frequented by young people. Both tourists and locals head to Omote-Sando area in Shinjuku to do shopping or spend some quality time at one of the many specialized cafes. Omote Sando is the place to go for entertainment, to see and be seen. The nightlife in the area, however, is not as popping as other areas like Shibuya. Making a music temple for dancing and being up all night in the Cat Street area seems like the way to make this area come to life for 24 hours a day, at least during the weekends. Since this area is residential too, there are specific considerations to keep in mind when designing a night life spot, but that doesn't mean it shouldnt be done!
