

Niamh supports a wide range of planning projects through research, planning appraisals and application management. Combining academic achievement with hands-on consultancy experience, she helps deliver effective planning solutions while continuing to develop her expertise through postgraduate study and practical project work.

BA Human Geography and Planning - Leeds Beckett University

Niamh joined Planning Potential in February 2025 as part of her university work placement programme and has since become a valued member of the team.

In July 2026, she graduated with First Class Honours in BA Human Geography and Planning and will commence a part-time Master's degree at Leeds Beckett University in September 2026, while continuing her role in the Harrogate office. Alongside her studies, Niamh supports a broad range of projects, assisting with research, planning appraisals, application preparation, submissions and project monitoring, gaining valuable experience across the planning process.

Outside of work, Niamh enjoys drawing and painting, often taking inspiration from floral photography captured during visits to local garden centres.
