Arts & Heritage Institution Pledge

We the leadership and board of this institution, pledge to do no harm. We are a cultural institution. We exist to tell the truth about who we are, where we have been, and what we are capable of, the beautiful and the terrible alike. We cannot do that work honestly while participating in a system that dehumanises the people whose stories, labour, and creativity have shaped this country.

We will not allow our institution to become complicit in the hostile environment. We will not require immigration status checks for artists, performers, or cultural workers beyond what the law strictly requires. We will not allow visa conditions to determine who gets to make art, who gets to be seen, and whose story gets told in this country.

We will not accept sponsorship or partnerships that are contingent on silence about migration policy or that use cultural programming to rehabilitate the reputation of institutions responsible for hostile environment enforcement. Culture is not decoration. It is not a rebrand. It is a mirror, and we will not let it be bought.

We will commission, platform, and pay migrant artists, refugees, and people from diaspora communities, not as a theme, not as a season, not as a diversity target, but as a permanent and central part of our programme. Their work is not niche. It is the story of this country.

We will use our public platforms to challenge the narratives that make the hostile environment possible: the dehumanisation, the othering, the careful separation of people into those who belong and those who do not. We will tell the stories that complicate those narratives, because that is what culture is for.

We will ensure that our spaces are genuinely accessible to everyone, regardless of immigration status. That means addressing language barriers, financial barriers, and the less visible barrier of not feeling welcome in institutions that have historically not been built for you.

Arts & Heritage Institution Pledge

We will look honestly at our own history, at whose labour built our collections, whose stories are missing from our archives, and whose contributions have been erased, and we will begin the work of telling a fuller, more truthful story.

We sign this pledge publicly and we invite our artists, our audiences, our staff, and our communities to hold us to it.
